FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

AMD L INC.'S JJB PLANT RECEIVES PRODUCTION APPROVAL FROM CHINESE STATE FOOD AND DRUG ADMINISTRATION

(TUSTIN, CA) May 8, 2009/PRNewswire – AMD L Inc. (NYSE Alternext US: ADL - News), a US-based pharmaceutical company with major operations in China, announced today it has received approval from the Chinese State Food and Drug Administration (sFDA) to re-initiate product production on a small injectable manufacturing line housed at the Company's Jiangxi JieXhong Pharmaceutical Co. (JJB) wholly foreign-owned subsidiary located in Shangrao, Jiangxi Province, China. The re-certified manufacturing line is used to manufacture AMD L's Goodnak® anti-aging injectable product and other small volume parenteral solutions.

The sFDA requires all China-based facilities engaged in the manufacture of pharmaceutical products to have "Good Manufacturing Practices" (GMP) certification. In Q108, JJB's GMP certification expired for the small volume parenteral solutions injection lines and the Company initiated $1.5 million in renovations to bring the line into compliance with the SFDA. With today's announcement, JJB has re-opened its Jiangxi-based production line and resumed operations for the small injectable manufacturing line, including production of AMD L's best-selling Goodnak anti-aging injectable product and other small volume parenteral solutions.

According to Mr. Douglas MacLellan, Chairman and CEO of AMD L Inc., "Our small volume injectables production line at JJB has resumed operations and we are currently manufacturing new Goodnak product. Sales are anticipated to resume in earnest by May 15th and AMD L remains on track with its quarterly and fiscal year business and financial projections."
